

Submissions

The policy and advocacy team prepares submissions to represent the interests of the profession.

Each year, the team completes about 30 submissions to state, territory and federal government agencies, international bodies and organisations in Australia about legislation, regulation, standards, codes, rules and other publications that affect our members.

Producing quality submissions often involves a number of steps. We decide the best way of getting the information we need depending on the submission. We've set out here the typical steps we take to write a submission.

Part of that process is consulting with members. We consult as widely as possible and frequently speak to the APA groups to get a broad range of opinions and expert feedback.

We encourage all our members to join the APA groups and contribute to our work.
